Charles Cross Went to Death, Coolly and Without a Trace of Emotion-His Awful Crime.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 20.-Charles B. Gram, the eighteen-year-old murders of Mrs. King, was hanged at the Consticut State prison at Wethersfield shortly after midnight. The execution off without a hitch.

The automatic gallows worked perbotly, and the boy's neck was broken the springing of the trap.

Cross was the cool, stolcal boy he was when he was first arrested. He showed no emotion, and when bidden to ascend the platform which started the death machine to work he did so without assistance or hesitation.

His hady will be buried in the prison yard after the autopsy to-day.

Cross was sixteen years old when he was employed by Freeman King a printer in New York, to live on the chores and to keep her company. Mr. King was in the habit of coming up to the farm to spend Sunday.
